The organization, program, and activities of the club shall be under the general direction of the county Extension agents of the Cooperative Extension Service, University of Arkansas System Division of Agriculture.

ARTICLE 4 – TYPES OF 4-H CLUBS

4-H clubs offer unique opportunities to members: the chance to learn life skills through a variety of project experiences, to participate in citizenship/community service activities, and to practice and hone leadership skills. Each club is an organized group of at least eight youth (ages 5–19) that have a planned meeting calendar with a minimum of six meetings scheduled throughout the year. 4-H clubs are advised by two non-related volunteer leaders and officers are elected by members. Meetings are held in public locations accessible to all potential members.

Community Club is an organized continuing multi-project group with elected officers, adult leaders, and planned programs throughout the year.

Project Club is an organized group with elected officers, adult leaders, and planned programs. The entire club focuses together on one project.

Project Group is a group of youth and leaders interested in learning about the subject matter for a specific project. This group does not follow the guidelines of an organized club, nor does it have elected officers. However, it does hold regular meetings to gain specific information in a specified project area.

After-School Club is an organized group of youth led by adult volunteer/staff within childcare settings. Clubs participate in planned activities, some of which are community service and project activities. Meetings include business conducted by the club’s officers, education programs, and group building or recreational activities; These may vary by site. All activities focus upon positive youth development.

In-School Club is a club with planned activities and elected officers that meets during school hours. This club operates about the same as community clubs except that a teacher may serve in the role of a club leader.

In order to gain immediate active status, a 4-H’er must submit a recommendation from their previous county Extension office stating that he/she was an active member in the previous state or county program. *They are not eligible to compete for or to receive county, district or state awards designating one winner over others. Voting privileges will be determined by individual clubs.
