Building a Case for LID

What is LID?
Low Impact Development (LID) aims to mimic natural water movement and processes by using small-scale, individual practices that infiltrate, evaporate, and transpire rainwater. Specifically, LID is designed to:
- Minimize impervious surfaces
- Disconnect stormwater flow paths (roofs, downspouts, parking areas)
- Slow down or capture stormwater runoff, let it spread out and soak in

In this workshop, you’ll learn about:

Municipal LID Policies
How ordinances hinder and encourage LID design and installation

Incorporating LID — The Developer’s Perspective
Why would developers invest in LID and what are the greatest challenges/rewards

LID: Return on Investment
Gauging profitability in concert with environmental and social impacts

LID Implementation... with Compromise
When your client really loves the idea of bioswales but wants knockout roses

Evolution of LID Aesthetics: How Far We’ve Come
Now that LID infrastructure has been installed, what does the landscape look like now that it is established?
