Purpose

The purpose of this record book is to provide you a concise, yet simple record-keeping system. Good record keeping is important for several reasons. Farmers, like other businessmen, must keep records to prepare an accurate income tax return. The farm income and expense sections in this record book are designed very similarly to the Schedule F (Form 1040) which will simplify income tax filing.

The use of the properly entered information in this record book, however, should go well beyond the filing of your income tax return. Records provide a basis for making management decisions and supporting and justifying credit requests.

The use of this record book starts with you and the attentiveness you give to recording the entries regularly. Expenses and receipts should be recorded in a regular and timely manner. Recording entries in a timely manner distributes the workload associated with record keeping and provides an accurate and up-to-date set of records. Failure to record information promptly may result in information either being omitted or entered incorrectly. The value of the record book begins when you frequently summarize and study the information it presents to you.

Your bookkeeping will be easier if you become familiar with your record book before using it. Subtotal each page, deposit all farm income in your bank account, pay all business expenses by check, and compare your bank statement with your record book each month.

IRS Publication 225, Farmer's Tax Guide, is referenced in several locations in this record book. The Farmer's Tax Guide is a valuable resource which explains how the federal tax laws apply to farming. Refer to the Farmer's Tax Guide for examples in how to use this record book.
